Waterproof Mitts

The five or ten cent cotton mitts which are so largely bought by workmen may be waterproofed by dipping them in melted paraffin, or, if a thinner coat is preferred and only on the palm of the mitts, melted paraffin may be brushed over their surface. For handling damp bricks, for working with plaster or cement, paraffin mitts are far superior to the original. Women will find them valuable when scrubbing floors, setting out plants, and so forth. Leather gloves for use by farmers in hauling damp corn fodder or any material that is wet may be waterproofed in the same way. The coating of paraffin may be renewed as often as the surface needs it. Mitts and gloves—even boots for ditchers—treated with paraffin last longer, because the water can do them little damage. The comfort the wearer experiences by using waterproofed mitts or gloves, says the Scientific American, far outweighs the bother of melting and applying the paraffin.

REAPING BENEFIT.

FROM THE EXPERIENCE OF DE LAND PEOPLE.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of DeLand residents on the following subject will interest and benefit thousands of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

J. N. Sawyer, Rich Ave., DeLand, Fla., says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills as they have given me splendid relief. My kidneys were weak and gave me great annoyance by too frequent passages of the secretions. I also suffered severely from backache and had a constant, dull pain through my loins. Some time ago I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and procured them. They relieved the backache, regulated the passages of the kidney secretions and made me feel a great deal better."
